TechExchange: NetWare Support has ended

On March 7th 2010 the support for NetWare has ended! What are your options now and more important "What are the risks if you do nothing"?

For many years NetWare has been a stable and reliable platform for a many different companies in all shapes and sizes. The successor of NetWare was introduced by Novell years ago with Open Enterprise Server 1. The known and trusted NetWare services based on a SUSE Linux Enterprise operating system. In the recent years Open Enterprise Server has been further developed into a mature networksystem that has been certified for more than 4200 applications globally and is interoperable with other groupware environments.

During the TechExchange on April 8 we will take you through a step by step process to effectively and successfully migrate to Open Enterprise Server. Many of our customers have already migrated to OES but do you know what the risks are if you don't do anything? In addition to providing you with practical tips and tricks from Novell Technical Sales Specialist Ron van Herk we are happy that Justin Zandbergen from Open Horizons will be sharing some Best Practices of migrations to Open Enterprise Server with you.

If you are still working with NetWare this technical event is the opportunity to have all your remaining questions about migrating from NetWare answered. In addition to the session by Ron and Justin we will equip you with all relevant media and whitepapers to help you make the right decision for your organization. As usual attendance to the TechExchange is free of charge.

We hope you welcome you on April 8 in Brussels.
